Universal Access Keyboard is one whose physical layout can be customized to the needs of individuals. People with disabilities often have difficulty using conventional keyboards because of the limited size and proximity of the keys. C is written using AVR studio and ImageCraft software into an Atmega16 microprocessor to control Tactex NTP-01 touch sensor boards. Position and pressure can be calculated that the customer can design keys in any location and shape they want.